February Sponsor:

The kitchen of Round Rock Café smells like fresh peppers, rosemary and baking yeast used to leaven whole-wheat sourdough bread made at the restaurant daily. The fragrance wafts into the dining and reception rooms at the front of the bright blue painted and renovated 1902 farmhouse that now houses the Round Rock Café, owned and operated by Jeff Workman.

One of the lunch combinations (under $7.00) paired the second handcrafted soup of the day, chicken and cheese tortellini with half a jerk chicken sandwich. Broth was flavored with roasted chicken and colorful vegetables including carrots, corn and yellow pepper. The jerk chicken was coated with a mixture of fresh ingredients, including ginger, green onion, cilantro, garlic, Cajun spices, cinnamon and habanero-which, despite its fame as the hottest chili, was mild enough for a sensitive palate. Ever wished for a personal robot, maybe one as smart as Hal in 2001 A Space Odysseys the Jetson's family robot, Rosie? Mona Eskandar, hospital administrative assistant at Christina Hospital in Wilmington says that with her ever increasing workload her new "assistant" saves a lot of time and allows her to stay in the front office instead of continually running blood samples to the lab. Mona's "assistant" is a robot, built by Adept Mobil Robots, whose sole task is to carry sample vials to the lab, 5,000 miles logged to date. Here's one for all of us, check out the iRobot Scuba 230 at <http://www.irobot.com/scooba230> . Bathroom cleaning will never be the same!

Join our Email List

Since most of us don't have millions of dollars to develop our own personal robotic administrative assistant come to the PWOw breakfast and we will use our imagination to design one for each of you. What would Rosie look like and do for you at home and at the office? Explore the possibilities, imagination and the creativity of the women around you. Money is no object and brainpower for this project is limitless!

Come find out how we will accomplish this and share a great breakfast.
